Italian Inheritance Tax. Italian inheritance law is founded on the principle of ‘unity of inheritance’, which means that any non-property assets are dealt with under the law of the country of last domicile, and property assets must be handled according to the law of the country where the property is located. A new EU ruling in 2015 did however amend this hard and fast rule, in as much as it is now possible for non-Italian residents to stipulate via an Italian will that they wish for the ...
