In other words, to say the mind is an emergent property of the brain is a guess. Furthermore, if the mind is an emergent property of the physical brain then it must necessarily be dependent upon the physical brain and also be restricted to the laws of physics. This would mean that "logical" conclusions the mind would make cannot be trusted to be true since such conclusions are restricted to the properties of the physical brain and its particular neurochemical wiring.

In philosophy, emergentism is the belief in emergence, particularly as it involves consciousness and the philosophy of mind, and as it contrasts with and also does not contrast with reductionism. A property of a system is said to be emergent if it is a new outcome of some other properties of the system and their interaction, while it is itself different from them. Emergent properties are not identical with, reducible to, or deducible from the other properties. The different ways in which this in
