Chasing The Ghost

The mysterious Ghost Orchid blooms in near darkness among rotting leaves on the forest floor. It blends into the background to the point of invisibility, yet glows, pale and ghostly. The ultimate grail of flower hunters, it has been spotted only once in the past twenty-five years. Its few flowers have a deathly pallor and are said to smell of over-ripe bananas.

The Ghost is in an abandoned Soviet airbase now home to desert nomads, The Ghost is in a privatized Mongolian copper mine, in a Vietnamese skateboarding park, it is in city planning, in storefronts and in signage. The Ghost is in fashion, in graffiti, in music, in art. Chasing the Ghost is in one sense global, and in another sense local. Globally, it seeks to find common cultural ground between disparate societies linked by the tides of world history.

Chasing Ghosts is a touching movie about a boy, Lucas, trying to figure out what death is all about because he had to deal with an incredible loss at such a young age. He does not seek out help from his parents because they too are hurting in their own way and have lost the capability to connect with him in a way he understands.
