The 'Big House' Era in Ireland. Big houses is what we call the posh large scale residences built by the super rich upper classes after the era of medieval castles concluded. They started to be built in the latter half of the 17th century, and took various forms, depending on architectural fashions. Some of these houses, mostly those that were built in the 19th century, may be called a 'castle' and may look a bit like a castle, imitating medieval features such as battlements and turrets.

The term big house (Irish: teach mór) refers to the country houses, mansions, or estate houses of the historical landed class in Ireland, which is itself known as the Anglo-Irish class. The houses formed the symbolic focal point of the Anglo-Irish political dominance of Ireland from the late 16th century, and many were destroyed or attacked during the Irish revolutionary period .
