Modern law reports aim to provide accurate full text records of judicial decisions and reasoning in cases that have legal value as precedents. They are dominated by cases from the higher courts and very rarely feature cases settled in the lower courts and tribunals.

Modern law reports and legal cases - The British Library

Case law is the law created by the courts. Although most laws are enacted by Parliament in the form of legislation, in a common law system such as ours the courts can also develop the law. By deciding a disputed point of law a senior court (known as a court of record) can change or clarify the law, thereby setting a precedent which other courts are bound to follow or apply in later cases.

What is case law? - ICLR

Many cases are brought before the courts. These cases are not simply examples of the way in which the law is applied; they also illustrate the way in which the law is made. Cases therefore need to be learned because the outcomes of cases in the past can shape the outcomes of cases in the future. Case law can be subdivided into:
