Human evolution is the lengthy process of change by which people originated from apelike ancestors. Scientific evidence shows that the physical and behavioral traits shared by all people originated from apelike ancestors and evolved over a period of approximately six million years. One of the earliest defining human traits, bipedalism -- the ability to walk on two legs -- evolved over 4 million years ago.

I much prefer to address human evolution in terms that are relevant to current biology and medicine. During the cell unit, students are introduced to evolution when studying the lactase enzyme and how only some of the population can digest milk. This HHMI activity requires students to graph and analyze data from blood glucose tests. As an extension of this activity, students read about the lactase-persistence gene and how it likely originated in pastoral groups of humans.
