Managing Contract Changes

Obviously, contract changes complicate the contract management process, but it does not have to derail things altogether or lead to disputes. Here are a few simple ways that the contract management team can effectively handle contract changes: 1. Use amendments or addenda to explain changes. The management team isn't always a part of the negotiations relating to a proposed change, and more than likely, they aren't really the ones that have the final say in approving any proposed change.

Managing Contract Changes

Usually, the employer and employee both need to agree to any contract changes. But an employee can insist on a change if they have a legal right to it.

Changing an employment contract - GOV.UK

Contract management encompasses everything from establishing the business case and confirmation of need through to relationship management and reviewing performance. It can be divided into two phases: upstream and downstream of the contract being awarded. The most successful contract management plan is one which includes a focus on upstream – or pre-award – activities.

Guide to Contract Management | CIPS

there's something in the contract that allows the change (usually called a 'flexibility clause') the employee agrees to the change; the employee's representatives agree to the change (for example, a trade union) An employer can force a new contract on employees, although this should be a last resort and could lead to legal action.

Contract management or contract administration is the management of contracts made with customers, vendors, partners, or employees. Contract management includes negotiating the terms and conditions in contracts and ensuring compliance with the terms and conditions, as well as documenting and agreeing on any changes or amendments that may arise during its implementation or execution.

Contract management - Wikipedia

The goal of the Contract Manager is to manage change effectively, and in accordance with the contract, to limit impact on the contract and project scope, schedule and budget. Fortunately, the terms and conditions and any special provisions contained in the contract documents will govern the way the parties deal with this change.
