The temporomandibular joint is a hinging disc joint that connects the temporal bone to the lower jaw. When a dysfunction of the temporomandibular joint is present, it can cause pain and stiffness of the jaw, as well as ringing in the ears; pain in the neck, back and head; and even teeth grinding. Dysfunction of the temporomandibular joint can be caused both by genetics or by injury, and currently there is no cure and very few options for treating the condition.
