Flashcards | Quizlet

In scientific terms, heritability is a statistical concept (represented as h^2) that describes how much of the variation in a given trait can be attributed to genetic variation. An estimate of the heritability of a trait is specific to one population in one environment, and it can change over time as circumstances change.

Heritability is expressed as $H^2 = V_g / V_p$, where H is the heritability estimate, V_g the variation in genotype, and V_p the variation in phenotype. Heritability estimates range in value from 0 to 1. If $H = 1$, then all variation in a population is due to differences or variation between genotypes (i.e., there is no environmentally caused variation). If $H = 0$, there is no genetic variation; in this case all variation in the population comes from differences in the environments experienced by ...

Heredity, also called inheritance or
biological inheritance, is the passing on of traits from parents to their offspring; either through asexual reproduction or sexual reproduction, the offspring cells or organisms acquire the genetic information of their parents. Through heredity, variations

between individuals can accumulate and

Heredity - Wikipedia

While heritable effects have been demonstrated in many organisms (Jablonka, 2013), the mechanisms
that enable long-
lasting
multigenerational epigenetic effects are better understood in nematodes, which have short generation times (3–4 days), and in plants, which are sessile organisms (Heard and Martienssen, 2014). Perhaps, similarly to worms, organisms with longer generation times can regulate the duration of heritable effects, using homologs “transgenerational timer” mechanisms.

A Tunable Mechanism Determines the Duration of the ...

A clear definition of heritable variation allows one to investigate the mechanisms maintaining heritable variation in nature and to optimize artificial selection schemes in agriculture. Here I propose a general definition of the heritable variation that determines the potential of a population to respond to genetic selection.
