The Significance of the Congress of Vienna

It must be noted that the Vienna congress of 1814/15 was the biggest international conference since the treaties of Munster and Osnabruck, which finally ended the 30-years-war in 1648. With the difference that back then the royals were not present, while this time they all came to decide about the future of Europe now that Napoleon Bonaparte had been defeated (not finally as they learned during the congress).
