John Russwurm Black Americans Of

John Brown Russwurm was an abolitionist, newspaper publisher, and colonizer of Liberia where he moved from the United States. He was born in Jamaica to an English father and enslaved mother. As a child he traveled to the United States with his father and received a formal education, becoming the first African American to graduate from Hebron Academy and Bowdoin College. As a young man, Russwurm moved from Portland, Maine, to New York City, where he was a founder with Samuel Cornish of the abolit

John Brown Russwurm - Wikipedia

Although he helped to change the terms of debate on race in America, Russwurm was not a native of America. Born in Jamaica on October 1, 1799, he moved to Quebec, Canada as a child and then to Maine, where he attended Bowdoin College and wrote term papers on Toussaint L'Ouverture, fiery leader of the Haitian Revolution.

John Russwurm (1799-1851) - BlackPast.org

John Brown Russwurm (1799-1851) is almost completely missing from the annals of the Pan-African movement, despite the pioneering role he played as an educator, abolitionist, editor, government official, emigrationist and colonizationist. Russwurm's life is one of "firsts": first African American graduate of Maine's Bowdoin College; co-founder of Freedom's Journal, America's first newspaper to be owned, operated, and edited by African Americans; and, following his emigration to ...

Born to a slave mother and a white American merchant father, Russwurm was educated in Quebec and graduated from Bowdoin College in 1826, making him one of the first black American college graduates. In 1827 he helped establish the first black newspaper in the U.S., Freedom's Journal, in New York.

John Brown Russwurm Biography | Infoplease

By tracing his thinking through these articles, we can see just how closely connected his idea of racial solidarity was with his belief that African Americans needed to develop their own middle-class literature. The best-known and most dramatic evolution in the pages of Freedom's Journal, of course, was that of the managing editor, John Russwurm. When he and senior editor Samuel Cornish started their newspaper, they were critical of the efforts of most white antislavery reformers.
