The traditional method of manual drafting is iterative and time consuming. After the advent of CAD, there has been a paradigm shift from traditional manual drafting to Computer Aided Design and Drafting. The clarity that can be achieved is easier to convey with the traditional drafting rather than the CAD drawing techniques.

5 Advantages of Manual Drafting and CAD Drafting ...

Draw all lines lightly in pencil initially until you come to the rendering stage of the drawing. Then you may use pencil and ink and “firm up” (darken) the lines and add the texture to render the drawing and give it contrast as well as depth. Step 1. Draw a plan of a room. Copy the one depicted for your first attempt.

Perspective Drawing by Hand Drafting for Interior Designers

Add lines to the drawing by gradual switching from a harder to a softer lead, leaving the softer lead for last (ie 2B or 4B) since they smudge easily. With the higher numbers you may need to blow off the dust it produces, never brush it away with your hand or you will smudge the drawing, always blow it away or use a drafting brush. A 2H lead works best for lettering, using anything softer than a HB will usually result in a lot of smudging and issues with erasing.
