During the screen design process, the best method for writing is similar to the one in case of drawing: we need to make sketches first. In other words, you should write down at least 6-8 versions of the copy. If we are ready with that, we need to choose the best. It is worth spending time on formulating the text.

In graphic design, communication happens through form and figure, color, composition, and typography. Each graphical element is a "word", such as the color of a shape. The color palette becomes a "sentence". How those colors are woven together throughout the design becomes a "paragraph". These paragraphs communicate meaning in the design.
