Oral Health Care

Access An

Access to oral health care is a not only a health issue; it reflects the ability of a profession to respond to the needs of the public and exhibit the principles of social justice and moral responsibility. 29 While the American Dental Association (ADA) and the American Dental Hygienists' Association (ADHA) agree that the dental profession has a responsibility to improve the oral health status of all Americans, they do not necessarily agree on how best to answer this call to action to solve ...

Oral Health and Care is an open access, peer-reviewed journal which considers manuscripts in all fields of oral health, dentistry and care. Manuscripts may take the form of original empirical research, critical reviews of the literature, brief commentaries, meeting reports, short communications and technical notes.

Oral Health and Care (OHC) - Open Access Text

(1) Many oral disorders and diseases are preventable; yet, oral health has not been widely promoted. Furthermore, access to oral health care is limited, largely due to inadequate insurance coverage and a limited supply of providers. Substantial oral health disparities between populations of different income levels, ages, and cultures also exist.

The National Institute for Health and Care Excellence (NICE) developed guidance which covers oral health, including dental health and daily mouth care, for adults in care homes. The aim is to maintain and improve their oral health and ensure timely access to dental treatment. They have also developed a quick guide for care home managers.

Oral health - Skills for Care

COVID-19 and Oral Health Disparities in Access to Care Access to oral health care is especially limited for populations at high risk for COVID-19. Patients with symptoms of COVID-19 are advised “to avoid nonemergent dental care” (23). Providers are advised, “if possible, [to] delay dental care until the patient has recovered” (23).

When considering access to health care, it is important to also include oral health care and obtaining necessary prescription drugs. Why Is Access to Health Services Important? Access to health services means "the timely use of personal health services to achieve the best health outcomes." 1 It requires 3 distinct steps:

Access to Health Services | Healthy People 2020

Five major types of outcome indicators are examined across each analytic group, with all outcomes based on parents reported perceptions of their child's dental care in the past year: 1) oral health based on the condition of their child's teeth (excellent or very good vs good, fair, or poor), 2) use rates for different types of dental services, 3) unmet dental needs, 4) perceptions of adequacy of access to dental providers, and 5) presence of and access to a usual source of dental care.
