A Rose for Emily Parts I-III Summary. chapters. 4-5. This William Faulkner story

focuses on the character of Emily Grierson and her life in the town of Jefferson. It is written in third person point of view, almost objective inasmuch that the reader never knows what is going on in Miss Emily's mind. However, occasionally it will use words, such as we and our, which pull it into a first person plural point of view, making the reader a part of the story.
