This review first appeared in Capital & Class , 40, 2, 2016, pp. 371-4. This collection is unfocused, uneven and incoherent, so does little credit to the editors or publishers. It would have been significantly improved had it done more to outline and compare some currently influential Marxist perspectives on Latin America – including Marxist, Leninist, Trotskyist and Gramscian approaches, at ...

Crisis and Contradiction - What's worth reading

Crisis theory, concerning the causes and consequences of the tendency for the rate of profit to fall in a capitalist system, is now generally associated with Marxist economics. Earlier analysis by Jean Charles Léonard de Sismondi provided the first suggestions of the systemic roots of Crisis. "The distinctive feature of Sismondi's analysis is that it is geared to an explicit dynamic model in the modern sense of this phrase... Sismondi's great merit is that he used, systematically and ...

Crisis And Contradiction: Marxist Perspectives On Latin ...

Because crisis is the concentrated explosion of all of the contradictions of capitalistic production, to concretely grasp crisis as such, one must first unfold all of the contradictions of capitalistic production according to their internal relations, and thus the significance of each contradiction as a moment within the totality must be elucidated, and then next one must clarify what processes they pass through and in what sense they must explode in a concentrated manner.

It does not remove the fundamental contradictions of capitalism. All it does is delay the crisis, but exacerbate it when it comes. This crisis is not a crisis of liquidity and credit, as they assert. Marx explained that it is not the lack of money that causes the crisis but the crisis that causes the lack of money.
