That said, I do question the title; this is NOT the "complete works." It lacks, for instance, Hadewijch's List of the Perfect. The List of the Perfect is crucial to my research—imagine my shock in turning to the end of Vision 13, and NOT finding it! Other than that, though, I highly recommend this volume of The Classics of Western Spirituality.

Hadewijch's Book of Visions (Visioenenboek), the earliest vernacular collection of such revelations, appears to have been composed in the 1240s. It prominently features dialogue between Hadewijch and Christ in visionary speech, an early example of this mode of vernacular religious instruction.
