The high speed needle controls the total fuel flow into the engine, and affects the engine's behavior from half to full throttle. The low speed needle tends to have more of an effect from half throttle down to idle. So the high speed mixture is set with the engine at full throttle; the low speed is set after throttling back to idle.

Datalogging of the engine sensor data during a wide open throttle run reveals the actual air consumption. This air consumption is used by the PCM to calculate engine load. Notice how this naturally aspirated engine develops approximately 86% engine load at WOT. An early form of fuel injection is central port injection.
