As an interested student of history and admirer of Churchill, I discovered late that he was an enthusiast for painting, a hobby in which I too developed an interest in my forties. A highly erudite and compelling writer, Churchill expresses more lucidly than anyone else ever could the pure joy experienced by the keen amateur painter.

David Cannadine, ed., Churchill: The Statesman as Artist, Bloomsbury, 2018, 172 pages, £25/$30. ISBN 978-1472945211.

Writing in his famous essay Painting as a Pastime, Winston Churchill said of his favorite hobby: "I know of nothing which, without exhausting the body, more entirely absorbs the mind."

There have been several good books that gather together examples of Churchill's paintings.

go under the hammer this summer at Sotheby's in London. The auction brings to light a little known but exceptionally fine painting by Winston Churchill (below right), which he presented as a gift to his favorite actress. Depicting roses from the garden at Chartwell displayed in a glass vase, the still life may have been done in the 1930s and given to Leigh in the late 40s or early 50s.

Rare painting by Winston Churchill fetches nearly £ ...

Painting as a Pastime had been printed in The Strand Magazine as early as 1921, but it was not until 1948 - nearly three decades after his first published words on the subject - that Churchill consented to a book about his hobby and passion. Soldier, writer, and politician, Churchill was perhaps an unlikely painter.

Although the book is about painting, the benefits and expectations apply to any pastime begun in later life. Because the expectations are lower the satisfaction can be greater. A very interesting read with color illustrations of Churchill's painting.
