Depression And Globalization The Politics

Depression and Globalisation is an important academic text on the political aspects of depression, specifically the relationship between globalisation and depression. In this text Dr. Walker reestablishes the link between mental health research and treatment, along with the political and economical influences outside the world of academic and clinical mental health.

Globalization and Great Depressions. The early twentieth century was an era of global integration, marked by extraordinary flows of goods, capital, and people: indeed some indicators, particularly in regard to capital market integration, show that this was an economy at least as “globalized” as the much touted globalized world of our new century. This essay traces the ways in which the globalized economy was destroyed, in the interwar Great Depression, by policy responses that were not ...
